1. Introduction

This report looks at the contribution of the Australian banking industry to government revenue through taxes and other levies, and compares this with the tax rates paid by banks in other countries and with the tax paid by other industries in Australia.

Key findings of this report are:

- The Australian banking industry pays a lot of tax and levies.
- Australian banks pay a high rate of tax relative to many banks overseas.
- The Australian banking industry pays the most income tax of any industry in Australia.
- Australia’s four major banks are the biggest individual corporate taxpayers.

It would seem fair to conclude that Australia’s banks are paying their way in terms of their contribution to government revenue and to national prosperity.

2. Tax paid by banks in Australia

Banks in Australia make a big contribution to government revenue. Over $14 billion in tax was paid to governments in 2016.

Almost $11.5 billion was paid to the Federal Government in corporate income tax; $1.1 billion in GST; $441 million in income tax on life insurance assets, and about $100 million in fringe benefits tax. Another $1 billion was paid to state and local governments in payroll tax, land tax and council rates and other taxes.

(b) Tax paid on life insurance policyholders’ investment earnings.

3. Tax paid by banks in other countries

The income tax rate for large corporates in Australia is a relatively high 30 per cent. There have been substantial reductions in the corporate tax rate for some key competitors over the past 10 years, but the corporate tax rate for Australia has not changed.

4. Tax paid by industries

Banks in Australia pay a lot of tax compared with other industries.

In 2016, a total of $22.4 billion in tax was paid by companies listed on the ASX 200. The seven companies classified as banks¹ paid $12.4 billion or 55 per cent of all tax paid by the ASX 200. This is much higher than any other industry.

² Although some mining companies paid significant amounts of tax, others incurred losses. The aggregate result across the 23 metals and mining industry companies was $851.6 million in tax paid.

Banks pay a lot of tax as an industry, and the industry also includes some of Australia’s biggest individual corporate taxpayers. In 2016, Australia’s four major banks were the top four tax-paying companies.

Only five companies paid over $1 billion in income tax in 2016.
