Changes in banking

In addition to the new Banking Code, Australian banks are making other changes to improve customer service and earn-back trust, including:

- No longer paying product sales commissions to retail bank staff
- Dedicated Customer Advocates in banks to improve situations for customers when things go wrong
- Better protection and support for whistleblowers, and
- Better conduct and oversight of mortgage brokers.

The new Banking Code is a set of enforceable standards that customers, small businesses, and their guarantors can expect from Australian banks.

Australian banks have completely re-written their Code of Practice to better meet community expectations. This new Code is the strongest ever. It is clearer, easier to understand, and has greater protections for all bank customers:

Customers
- A plain-English, customer-friendly Code which helps customers understand their rights and obligations.
- Customers can be given lists of direct debits and recurring payments, making it easier to switch banks.
- Notice of transaction fees will be provided before they occur.
- Banks will take extra care when providing banking services to customers who are experiencing vulnerability.
- Better protections for guarantors to ensure they understand their obligations, including a cooling-off period.
- Guarantors will be notified of changes to the borrower’s circumstances, including if they are experiencing financial difficulty.

Credit Cards
- Banks will remind customers when a credit card introductory offer is about to end.
- No unsolicited offers to increase limits.
- Customers can reduce their credit limits or close their card accounts online.

Stronger Enforcement and Compliance
- The independent Banking Code Compliance Committee (BCCC) will investigate alleged breaches of the Code.
- The BCCC can formally warn a bank, require them to rectify or take corrective action for serious breaches, require a bank to train staff, and report serious, systemic and ongoing issues to ASIC.
- The Code is binding on subscribers and is used by the Australian Financial Complaints Authority as a benchmark across the banking industry.

Royal Commission Changes
- Ceasing default interest and fees on agricultural loans while farms are affected by drought or natural disaster.
- Ensuring services to people with limited English and those living in remote areas are inclusive and accessible.
- Removing overdraft and dishonour fees on basic, low fee or no fee accounts for concession card holders.
- Basic bank accounts to be uniform across the industry.

Small Business
- Simplified loan contracts with fewer conditions for total loans under $3 million.
- Provide longer notice periods for when loan conditions change.
- Improved communication and greater transparency when using valuers and insolvency practitioners.
